HOLI CELEBRATION AND GAIR DANCE COMPETITION

Tribal traditions are a natural part of the larger cultural landscape of India. The tribal brothers living in every corner of India have lived their age-old traditions and by their discharge have been enriching their generations and Indian society. One such tradition is to play Gair dance on the holy festival of Holi. The Garba dance of Gujarat, the Bhangra of Punjab, etc., along with being the medium for the manifestation of the joy of the common man, have an introduction in the general parlance. It is unfortunate that this beautiful and fun dance festival of the Bhil community of Rajasthan could not find its place in popular culture. Perhaps the result of this was that Gair-dance was banned a few years ago due to administrative apathy and insensitivity. But tribal community is the life line of of Banswara pariyojana, and if this is disrupted, the community will fall apart. One such culmination is that the Banswara project started organizing non-dance at Rati Talai Maidan in front of its own courtyard on the occasion of Holi. Due to administrative orders, the project workers are busy in their preparations with the fear that the program may not be successful, but when the traditions see the administrative paper, it is like a continuous stream of creation. On the day of the program, the Bhil Samaj was present in large numbers and danced with joy. A small storm saved the tradition from being blocked. Thousands of Bhil community brothers and sisters participated in this event organized by Banswara Project. In the concluding session of the program, non dance group of Sagwadia village was honored by Lalibav Math Mahant Shri Hari Om Dasji Maharaj and Ramswaroop Ji Maharaj with the first prize. After the program everyone's affection was kept, where everyone dined together and experienced the holy bliss throughout the program.

TEACHER'S TRAINING PROGRAM AND PURVANCHAL VISIT

The Banswara pariyojana has been a continuous effort for the last 14 years to connect the local tribal society with the basic concept of India by making education the basis of education in the eastern region of Assam, Tripura, Meghalaya, and Mizoram. Whose positive changes are beginning to be seen in the area today. More than 100 schools and Sanskar centers are being operated in the area by the Banswara project, where more than 3500 boys and girls are benefiting. This year a three-day residential Acharya training class was organized. Till 19-24 March, this event was organized in Chelgaon, Gomti district and Karamsora, Agar Tala district. Shri Kailash Jaiswal, Himmat Singh Deora, Sohan Lal Bhuria, and Kailash Singh Ninama were in the training class. In this three-day residential camp, information of the new and better medium of imparting education and it's development, brainstorming, intellectual and educational dissemination was given in different sessions. Retired IG Shri VK Rai's guidance was received in the summit session.

In this camp Mr. Shubham Shekhar Bhattacharya, President of Public Welfare Service Trust, and Mr. Pooran Chand Mandal, Province Minister, Purvanchal.
